

No. Travelors have a right to not be interrupted with others phone conversations. People tend to speak in a high volume when using cell phones. If you multiply this level by even 10 times, the noise level, in a confined space of an airplane would be unbearable.